

November 17, 2025

Admissions Committee
MSc Financial Markets & Investments
SKEMA Business School

Dear Members of the Admissions Committee,

It is my pleasure to recommend Mehak Sharma for admission to the MSc Financial Markets & Investments program at SKEMA Business School. I have had the privilege of teaching Mehak in FIN 4035: Financial Information & Valuation, one of the most demanding courses in our undergraduate finance curriculum at the University of Cincinnati, where she distinguished herself as a student of exceptional analytical ability, maturity, and drive.

From the outset, Mehak stood out for her intellectual curiosity and depth of insight. She approached valuation assignments with the discipline and precision of a graduate-level analyst—testing multiple scenarios, questioning assumptions, and clearly articulating the rationale behind her forecasts. In our team-based financial modeling project, she often emerged as a quiet leader, guiding her group through complex forecasting and cost of capital decisions while ensuring that every member understood the reasoning behind their conclusions. Her ability to blend technical rigor with strategic interpretation reflects a skillset that is rare among undergraduates.

Beyond the classroom, Mehak has built an impressive foundation of professional experience that speaks to her readiness for SKEMA's rigorous, practice-oriented environment. Her internships with Compass Lexecon (FTI Consulting), Ameriprise Financial, and Two Roads Advisors demonstrate her capacity to apply valuation, econometric, and investment analysis across diverse contexts—from litigation consulting to asset management and investment banking. She combines this with a remarkable portfolio of leadership initiatives, including co-founding Women in Finance and Women in Entrepreneurship, and launching Nexus Flair, a sustainable venture connecting Kashmiri artisans to global luxury markets. These experiences reveal both quantitative strength and a broader vision for finance as a tool for empowerment and global connection.

What most impresses me about Mehak is her balance of intellect, empathy, and execution. Her academic record and competitive placements in programs such as McKinsey Forward, Harvard Global Case Competition, and PNC's EmpowerHer Brilliance Series illustrate her discipline and global orientation. Yet she pairs these achievements with humility, thoughtful leadership, and a collaborative spirit that elevates those around her. She has the rare capacity to analyze problems with the precision of a consultant and the perspective of a leader who sees the people behind the numbers.

I have no doubt that Mehak will excel in the MSc Financial Markets & Investments program and contribute meaningfully to SKEMA's international academic community. Her analytical rigor, global mindset, and leadership maturity align seamlessly with the program's mission to prepare finance professionals who bridge markets and ideas across borders.

Please do not hesitate to contact me at jamie.weathers@uc.edu if I can provide additional information.

Sincerely,

Jamie Weathers, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor of Finance - Educator
Carl H. Lindner College of Business
University of Cincinnati